

Docket-04-435. I believe allowing cell phone use in flight would cause many disruptions. This could escalate into serious problems when you have passengers who ignore basic common courtesies and are oblivious to others passengers. We already see it with portable electronic devices that are used too loud. And if there is an emergency (medical or aircraft), will everyone be able to hear our requests, instructions, or commands? And will the phone calls end or continue? It is already a battle to get some of the passengers to turn off their phones just to taxi out. I am a flight attendant at Northwest Airlines in my 20th year and do not want cell phone use during the flight. Let there be peace!
